The location was Edelweiss Resort, Garmish, Germany. The cost per unit was $910.00, plus, transportation and three lunches. The training entailed 7 hours of classroom instruction and a 4-hour practical teambuilding exercise. The travel time was used to complete a personality profile evaluations.
2. FACILITY: It was outstanding. The conference center, rooms, outside activities, fitness center and food were great. There were minor technological difficulties in setting up and the hotel staff was quick to respond. The weather was also good. Even had snow on our last day.
3. TRAINING: Three over all evaluations of the training was rated excellent and eight were above average. Some of the suggested changes were 1) several requested more time, 2) more team projects, 3) several suggested the need to conduct training with a larger group so there would be more diversity, 4) one person suggested conducting more class time at night and outside, 5) another suggested to change the schedule to 0800-1700 hours, 6) slow down and go into more details.
4. QUOTES: "The training was very useful in helping to understand others and yourself." "This course will help you understand how to organize and work within teams." "This class was the Bomb." "Fun and informative weekend." "Great class given by a very knowledgeable instructor and I would recommend it for all leaders, military and civilian." "Great class to understand other people and yourself." "It's fun."
5. LEADERSHIP: After the class instruction and the teambuilding project, I asked the Soldiers to rate the over all consensus that this training would be good for all leaders. The value of the training rated very high. So, from a scale of -27 (worthless) to +27 (very important) it was +25.
